Abstract

Breast cancer is the most common cancer in women, and survivors with this diagnosis account for almost one fourth of the over 14 million cancer survivors in the US. After several decades of basic and clinical trials research, we have learned much about the heterogeneity of breast cancer and have evolved a complex and multidisciplinary treatment approach to the disease. Increasingly, we are paying attention to the long term and late effects of breast cancer treatment, and this is largely the subject of this volume. In this chapter, the authors introduce the topic of breast cancer survivorship and highlight the organization and content of this volume, briefly describing the contents of the subsequent chapters.

The image shows the exterior of the Louis Calder Memorial Library. The building is a modern structure with white, vertically-ribbed walls and large glass windows. A vibrant, colorful mural is mounted on the white wall. A bright green awning covers the entrance, which has a black sign above it. A set of concrete steps with black metal railings leads up to the entrance. To the left, there are lush green trees and a palm tree. The sky is clear and blue.
